End in Uganda

UGANDA'S President Idi Amin has now taken the ultimate step and ordered the expulsion of all Jews from his country including Israel's diplomatic representatives in Kampala.

Whatever his motives, and however unrelated they are to the work and dedicated effort of Israel's investment in Uganda, Amin's action is a diplomatic setback for Israel, and it has led to considerable public discussion regarding our technical assistance and investment projects in Africa in general.

It is clear that a distinction must be drawn between a rebuff in one country and the whole fabric of our relations with Africa. Moreover, once the gates of our Embassy in Kampala are shut, this distinction should be annulled by the Government in clear terms to meet doubts at home and to reaffirm our policy to our friends everywhere.

In doing so the Government, which has shown much restraint in its response to the wild charges of General Amin, should also elucidate the story of our effort in Uganda, which Amin has chosen to make and discredit. The record must be set straight both for the citizens of Israel and for those abroad who may deduce that Israel is good game for any kind of political manhandling.

Israel Moroccans

THE first convention of Moroccan Jews is being held almost 20 years after the first wave of immigration that ultimately brought over 350,000 Moroccan Jews to Israel.

If we are to seek the answer to this delay in creating an articulate organization, most of it must be sought in the fact that the community's leaders, by and large, emigrated to more prosperous areas than Israel was in the early fifties. The political leadership in Israel at that time was also opposed to communal organizations, favouring the organizations on party and ideological lines that had existed in the past.

Meanwhile the number of individual Israelis of Moroccan origin who have made good is considerable and growing. There were high-ranking army officers and policemen in the audience when the convention opened on Tuesday. They are the generation that has grown up in Israel, and followed the Israeli pattern of studies and advancement. But not all were equally fortunate, for in general a child's desire for a study must be encouraged by the parents. Where parents have had little schooling themselves they tend to push their children out early to begin working and contributing to the family exchequer. These conditions were particularly discouraging for the large families.

The Moroccan Jews experienced another major misfortune when they came at a time when Israel's resources were over-extended, the State was scarcely organized and still in the midst of wars. Immigrants were taken to camps with far less than minimum conditions. Others, who had come from more affluent backgrounds, struggled fiercely to get away from the camps to some kind of acceptable housing. Some of the Moroccan Jews who had lived in sub-standard conditions in North Africa did not make the same effort to get away from poor conditions, and it is only the younger generation that has discovered that homes depend not only on the bare building but on the living habits of the people in them.

The related efforts of the Moroccan Jews to re-establish a communal organization and take pride in the achievements of Moroccan Jewry in the past is significant. The opposition to communal preservation and communal ties only causes frustration. Israel is strong enough today to support different forms of activity to a common goal. This has apparently been realized now by the leaders of the State, who have not only ended their opposition to the establishment of a Moroccan Association, but made it a point to attend and greet this week's founding meeting.

Sympathetic hearing for Hussein in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nixon Administration listened sympathetically to King Hussein, carefully avoided public commitment to his settlement proposals and rejected most of his requests for increased military and economic aid.

But privately some American officials are encouraged by what they see as an "evolving flexibility" in Hussein's thinking about a possible settlement with Israel. This flexibility, rather than the specifics of any of his proposals, were regarded as helping to create a better climate for an eventual agreement.

This assessment of Hussein's visit to Washington and his talks with President Nixon, Secretary of State William Rogers and Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, was shared by a number of informed observers and American officials.

According to these sources Hussein sought, but did not receive, an additional $15m. in military aid already set at about $40m. American officials reportedly explained to Hussein that Congress was unlikely to agree to any further amounts and would not increase the $40m. in economic supporting assistance provided for the current fiscal year.

But there was informed speculation in Washington that during his talks with Secretary Laird, Hussein was assured that the Jordanian Air Force would receive replacements for the F104 Starfighters reportedly sent to the Pakistani Air Force during the Bengal Desh war.

The Nixon Administration's response to the King's West Bank proposals demonstrated the sensitivity in Washington to public discussion of the plan which has been rejected both by Israel and a number of Arab governments, according to American and Jordanian sources.

Hussein "seemingly sought no resolution" any endorsement by President Nixon of his plan.

In commenting on the 90-minute meeting between President Nixon and the Jordanian ruler, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler avoided direct comment on the question of whether the West Bank plan might help "create the environment" for a settlement.

Mr. Ziegler at first said that the plan might be a step toward helping the Palestinians develop "a voice in shaping their own future." But after discussing the answer with a member of Dr. Henry Kissinger's staff present at the news briefing, Mr. Ziegler modified his remarks insisting that he would not say one way or another whether the Hussein initiative would help a settlement.

Mr. Ziegler noted that President Nixon had told Hussein that the U.S. remained ready to continue efforts to facilitate moves towards peace — a reference, it was understood, to the continuing American interest in promoting the close-proximity talks for an interim Suez Canal settlement.

Nixon may visit Iran

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House confirmed yesterday that President Nixon is seriously considering a visit to Tehran, Iran, after he concludes his summit meeting in Moscow at the end of May.

But deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said Mr. Nixon was not planning to make any other stops during the journey. There has been speculation in Washington that Mr. Nixon might visit Israel and Saudi Arabia and continue onto Bonn to brief a NATO foreign ministers meeting.

Plans for the former presidential travel after the Moscow trip were disclosed by informed officials in the White House on Wednesday announced another major diplomatic initiative — a fence-mending visit by White House adviser Henry Kissinger to Japan next month.

Officials indicated he was going there — three months after Mr. Sato conferred with the President in California — to give Japan further assurances about U.S. diplomatic and economic policies.

Diplomatic observers said President Nixon might want to assure the Shah of Iran that his initiative towards the Soviet Union did not weaken the 1958 treaty of cooperation in which the U.S. pledged to take appropriate action to meet any act of aggression against Iran.

Israel beats Indonesia 1-0

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel beat Indonesia 1-0 yesterday in a quality match for the Munich Soccer Olympics.

As a result of this win Israel's semi-final opponent tomorrow will be Thailand. Indonesia will play Burma on Sunday in the other semi-final and the two winners will meet next Tuesday to decide who goes to Munich.

Last night's match was the most exciting yet played by any of the teams in this six-nation Asian Zone Two tournament. The match drew a 30,000 capacity crowd to the Aungmye Stadium, as both teams were seen as possible Zone Two champions.

The Israel goal was scored by Victor Saroussi, making his first appearance for the national side in Burma. He scored with a volley shot in the 47th minute from a pass by Netanyu Masabi during the first half.

Israel played its best game yet in the tournament though lacking finishing power in front of goal.

In the 50th minute referee Dillon of Singapore sent off Gioza Spiegel for using bad language to a Thai player. Spiegel will not be permitted to play in the semi-final and faces a disciplinary committee today.

Best for Israel were Yvoker, Rosendoren, Shun, and Schwager. Saroussi missed two good chances in the first quarter of an hour.

Hussein proposes shared Jerusalem

By SAM LIPSKI
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON — King Hussein has proposed that as part of a final peace agreement Jordan and Israel should share the administration of Jerusalem as a "unified, open city — a meeting place for the three great religions of the world."

In an interview published in the "New York Times" yesterday, King Hussein specifically rejected a return to the divided, half-Arab, half-Israeli status that prevailed in Jerusalem between 1948 and 1967. "In the context of peace," the King said, "Jerusalem could become an open city. It could be the capital of Israel and the capital of the Palestinian portion of Jordan."

The Jordanian ruler was interviewed in Washington before entering Walter Reed Army Hospital yesterday for a medical check-up.

In a separate interview with the "Washington Post" King Hussein left open the possibility that he might make a separate peace with Israel if a concerted Arab effort at settlement proves impossible.

The "Post" reported that Hussein twice declined to rule out a Jordanian-Israeli agreement when explicitly questioned. When pressed, he said: "I believe that the greatest difficulties lie on the (Continued on page 13, Col. 4)

Uganda ousts Israel mission

Jerusalem Post Staff

Israel said yesterday "surprising measures" on the part of Uganda led to President Idi Amin's decision to order its Embassy closed in Kampala. A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry said the Government acknowledges receipt of the Ugandan order to have the Israeli diplomatic mission there closed within 10 days.

This announcement followed a number of surprising measures on Uganda's part in the past few weeks which had terminated the network of fruitful and friendly and mutually beneficial relations, the statement said.

Everything Israel has done in Uganda, the Foreign Ministry said, "has been at the request of the Ugandan Government."

The statement said there were 149 Israeli men in Uganda, half of them with the Embassy and the other half with commercial firms doing construction and advisory work. Their families include 134 women and 197 children, bringing the total to 470.

Idi Amin, announcing the move yesterday, said he had made his decision because Israelis living in Uganda were engaging in "subversive activities."

Addressing Uganda's top army, air force, prison and police officers at an international conference centre here, Amin went on to claim that Israeli agents had taken part in the sabotage of the construction of the Albertine Road. He also expressed fear of possible Israeli attempts to sabotage projects being undertaken by Israeli construction companies.

Uganda's closing of the Israeli Embassy does not constitute a formal breaking off of diplomatic relations. It would not come as a surprise in Jerusalem, however, if Uganda takes such a step in the near future. Israel is not likely to break off relations at its own initiative.

Uganda has no representatives in Israel, despite President Amin's declaration when he was here last July that he would shortly open an Embassy in Jerusalem.

The 14 Ugandan students taking part in courses on agriculture and community planning in Israel will not be sent home. The courses are due to end within the next few weeks.

Another large group of Israelis, including some 40 women and children, returned last night aboard a special El Al flight from Uganda, via Nairobi.

Reuters reports from Kampala that work was still continuing at midday yesterday on one Israeli construction project in the centre of Kampala. It was thought to be a Solel Boneh project.

Meanwhile, informed sources in Tel Aviv said the two Israelis who Amin said left Kampala under mysterious circumstances earlier this week were military instructors who returned to Israel following President Amin's order for the withdrawal of all Israeli military personnel.

The sources said the two men — Avshalom Shafran and Yitzhak Shany — were members of a group of 10 military instructors who stayed in a Kampala hotel before traveling to the airport where they boarded an airliner on Sunday for Israel.

Amin had charged that the two checked out of a luxury hotel, leaving Uganda army uniforms and 14 rounds of ammunition in their rooms. But the sources here said the two men did not go by train to Kenya and that they had been interviewed by the Ugandan authorities.

The members of the Ugandan Army are identical with those used by the Israeli Army and were supplied to Uganda by Israel, the sources said. The two men, together with the other instructors, arrived in Israel by air on Monday, the sources said.

A top Egyptian Foreign Ministry official, Hassan Bobol, is having talks with Ugandan officials at Kampala believed to deal with the promotion of relations between the two countries.

Three of the 10 Turkish People's Liberation Army terrorists killed by Turkish commandos yesterday. Cayan was one of the accused in the kidnap-murder of Israeli Consul-General Ephraim Eitam in Istanbul last May.

Hostages found murdered as Turks storm house killing ten terrorists

KIZILDERE, Turkey — Turkish commando units found three kidnapped NATO radar technicians murdered inside a house today, then killed 10 terrorists in a room-by-room gun battle, the Government announced last night.

The Government said an earlier report by local authorities and the state-controlled news agency that the hostages and their abductors died in an explosion was untrue.

Commandos stormed the two-story house in this mountain village of 1,257 after terrorists holed up inside all day opened fire on troops, the Government said.

Inside, Turkish commandos found the bodies of three men — two British and one Canadian — kidnapped on Sunday night near a Turkish air force base.

A room by room battle followed inside the house and all the terrorists were captured dead," the Government statement said.

The civilian victims were identified as Gordon Banner, 36, and Charles Turner, 45, both British, and John Law, 24, a Canadian whose family lives in England. They were working in Turkey as civilian radar technicians when they were kidnapped in the Black Sea town of Unye. A letter left behind said they would die if three condemned terrorists were executed.

Police besieged the house, owned by village official Emrullah Eraslan, early yesterday after receiving a report the terrorists and their hostages were inside. The wife and two children of the village official were freed before the last act in the day-long drama. The village — the name means red or bloody stream — is located 122 kms. from the scene of the kidnapping.

The Government statement said troops found the hostages dead, shot and bound hand and foot, when they entered the house. "Despite announcements over loudspeakers calling on the bandits to surrender," the statement said, "the terrorists opened fire on Government forces..." Then came the order to attack.

Earlier, the state-controlled Anadolu News Agency said the terrorist lawyer flown to the village to negotiate the release of the hostages.

Israel Surucu, the deputy governor of Nisapur province, was quoted as saying the house was demolished. There was no explanation for the rival versions of the final minutes of the siege.

Commandos surrounded the house at 5 a.m. but held fire in order to protect the hostages. "You will have to bargain with us," they inside shouted, "or we will kill the hostages."

Officials said three of the 10 terrorists is Mahir Cayan, Turkey's most-wanted fugitive. Cayan was involved in a similar showdown in Istanbul last June when he holed up in an apartment with an accomplice holding a 14-year-old girl as hostage.

He was captured and wounded and the accomplice was killed. But Cayan and two other terrorists killed in the house, Cihan Alptekin and Omer Yana, escaped from a military prison last November. They were accused in dozens of terrorist acts including the kidnap-murder of Israeli Consul-General Ephraim Eitam last May. If captives blew up the building, killing themselves, the three hostages and turned they faced virtually sure death penalties.

Military authorities said about 500 commandos carried out the raid, which began after gunfire came from within the house.

A witness told UPI: "I approached the house to within 50 metres, where the front-line commandos were. The bullets were raining on the troops from the house. A device thrown out of the second story of the house exploded near us commander. A 23-year-old novice was wounded in one hand. Special police forces were brought in and started firing tear gas grenades into the house. Later on a full-scale attack started. The raid lasted 45 minutes."

In London Sir Alec Douglas-Home, British Foreign Secretary, said in a statement last night that the death of the three western technicians as a result of their "abduction by Turkish terrorists is deeply distressing to us all. Our sympathy goes out to their families." (UPI, AP, Easeter)

Bolivia expels 119 Russians

LA PAZ (UPI) — Bolivia on Wednesday night gave 119 Soviet diplomats and Embassy staff members seven days to quit the country, declaring that they were linked with a Cuban-inspired invasion due to have begun at dawn yesterday.

Foreign Minister Mario Gutierrez insisted the mass expulsion did not mean Bolivia is breaking off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. It was not immediately known if the Ambassador was among those being expelled.

Interior Minister Mario Adelt said the government had intercepted documents which proved foreign participation in the internal affairs of the country and the existence of a plot code-named "Operation Dawn" organized by the Havana-based Latin American Solidarity Organization. The operation involved the landing of men on Bolivian soil and was timed to start at dawn yesterday, he said.

'Right-wing plot to murder Allende'

SANTIAGO (Reuter). — Details of an alleged right-wing plot to assassinate President Salvador Allende and seize power last week-end have been disclosed here. Meanwhile, Congressmen here have called a debate on charges of U.S. involvement in a reported plan to prevent Dr. Allende taking office in 1970.

Chile's Interior Minister made startling disclosures that rightist conspirators were foiled in a scheme to attack the Presidential palace, kill Dr. Allende and stage a coup.

The minister said that the rebels had planned to free from jail a retired general, Roberto Viaux — who was named in allegations by the Washington columnist Jack Anderson recently as a possible coup leader in 1970.

It was alleged that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (C.I.A.) and the giant International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (I.T.T.) were involved in a plan to prevent Dr. Allende taking office 17 months ago.

Police swoop

It is alleged that the main instigator of the plot was a retired Army major, Arturo Marshall. The major had close links with a "neo-fascist" group whose leaders were arrested last week in a police swoop at dawn which seized a small arsenal of arms suitable for street fighting.

The Government alleged that the right-wingers planned to take advantage of the women's march banned for later the same day — and planned to enter the authorities — to mount their coup.

The Government denied that active officers of the armed forces and the elite Carabineros — paramilitary police — were being held in connection with the alleged plot. On the contrary, it was stated, they had spurned approaches from the conspirators and had denounced them to the authorities.

Ceylon is vital factor in power struggle

By TREVOR DRISBERG
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

NEW DELHI. — Geography makes the island of Ceylon the single most crucial factor in any system of geopolitical strategy in the Indian Ocean region west of the Straits of Malacca and east of Aden.

Thus it assumes an increasingly important role as the super powers jockey for positions of strength in this region in which India has the longest coastline. And as the leading power in the area, it has the biggest stake in any future military-political alignments.

Accordingly, two recent developments in Ceylon, or Sri Lanka — the ancient name to which it has reverted under the new constitution framed by the leftist coalition government headed by Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike — have aroused more than passing interest in New Delhi.

One of them is the four-day official visit to Colombo in mid-March of Admiral John McCain, commander-in-chief of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The other is the supply of two gunboats from China for coastal patrolling, ostensibly to track smugglers and illegal immigrants from India. Three more of the same type are on order and some military experts here believe that more powerful types of vessels may follow.

The experts link these developments with joint American and Chinese moves to establish a stronger military presence in the Indian Ocean. They also think the Ceylon Government may be preparing to give U.S. and Chinese naval units fueling, and rest and recreation facilities in Ceylon.

This is a worrying thought to India, which has already objected strongly to the British grant of similar facilities to the U.S. fleet in Diego Garcia, an island further south in the Indian Ocean and of considerably less importance strategically to India than Ceylon.

Mrs. Bandaranaike's Sri Lanka Freedom Party (S.L.F.P.), the major component of the coalition government, has a strong group of leaders with a pronounced tilt towards Peking, the main provider of economic aid to the island.

Their liking for the Chinese is matched by their suspicion of India, the "big brother" separated from Ceylon by the 24-mile-wide Palk Strait. Unfortunately for India, the ever, fear of India seems to have impelled the S.L.F.P. leaders to take a kinder attitude to the U.S. and China.

Military experts are speculating that Admiral McCain's recent visit may have had the purpose of exploring the ground for a long-term agreement on providing base facilities for units of the U.S. 7th Fleet at Trincomalee, on the east coast of Ceylon, one of the finest natural harbours in the world. Ceylon needs money badly, and this would be one way of earning dollars quickly. Similar facilities might also be provided to China.

In short, in the event of the formation of a front comprising China, the U.S. and Pakistan directed towards curbing Indian and Soviet influence in the Indian Ocean region, Ceylon may become a focal point of this policy of containment.

Such a development would certainly be disastrous to India and the Soviet Union. It would probably evoke much criticism in Ceylon too, but this could perhaps be stifled by arguing that the American and Chinese presence are a protection against Indian "acquisitiveness."

India's attitude to its smaller neighbours was, however, stated in clear terms by President Gird in an address to Parliament on March 18 when he said: "We want this subcontinent, and indeed the entire South Asian region and the Indian Ocean Area, to be free from power rivalry or domination and to develop into an area of peace and cooperation rather than one of confrontation."

India would also like to encourage and foster greater regional cooperation, particularly in the fields of technology, trade and transport, science and culture, first and foremost between countries of the subcontinent and then with other countries of South Asia, Southeast Asia and West Asia.

But such statements from New Delhi send shivers down the spines of S.L.F.P. politicians. They believe Indian offers of cooperation are just a bait to gobble up little Sri Lanka. And so the prospect of Peking and Washington coming closer to each other after President Nixon's visit to China and taking joint action to assert control over the Indian Ocean region is said to have caused much joy in Colombo.

There was at least one dissident member when a group of 151 cheerful South American immigrants arrived at Lod Airport this week. But perhaps the misgivings of the young fellow in the middle were only temporary.

Sabotage suspect to be extradited

By H. BOAS
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

AMSTERDAM. — THE Swedish High Court has agreed to extradite to Holland the Algerian Abdel Malik Kadri, who is suspected of having been involved in the sabotage of the Gulf Refineries near Rotterdam in March 1971, causing damage of over $12m.

Kadri was named in this connection by Evelyn Barge, who was jailed in Israel last year for planning sabotage there. During the Israeli investigation she also confessed to the sabotage of the Gulf Refineries, which until then had remained a mystery.

Thirty-year-old Kadri, who has a Swedish wife, was arrested in Uppsala last January, at the request of the Dutch authorities. He denies having been involved in the matter and says he has witnesses that on the day of the attack he was in Paris, where his father is on the staff of the Algerian Embassy.

Abdel Malik Kadri's Swedish lawyer told a Dutch correspondent in Sweden that the Dutch extradition request had been inspired by the "anti-Arab feelings current in Holland."

Although the request has now been granted, the actual extradition may, for technical reasons, still take some time.

BONN'S HAIR - NET ARMY

By BOBIS KIDEL

BONN (Otns). — West Germany's army, heirs to a tradition of blind obedience and Prussian drill, is in the throes of a major crisis.

In their anti-authoritarian mood, young Germans of 1972 are reluctant to perform their military service, and when they do they rebel even against the greatly liberalized army discipline of the post-war era. "Discipline and order have deteriorated widely in the army during the past year," says Fritz-Rudolf Schultz, the Parliamentary Delegate for the Armed Forces in his annual report.

Schultz notes in his report that the "reluctance to renounce professional progress and material gain while serving the community in the armed forces for 18 months is more pronounced than ever before."

Within one year the number of conscientious objectors has risen from 19,363 to 27,657. One of the chief reasons for this growing anti-army attitude, Schultz says, is that in the present climate of global détente, young Germans simply no longer believe that their country is exposed to an external threat. Minimizing the strength of the Warsaw Pact nations, they do not believe in the likelihood of Communist aggression.

Their feeling, the report says, is that the Communist and Western blocs are destined to overcome their conflicts by drawing into closer relations. As the result of these attitudes they doubt whether West Germany really needs conscription or even an army today.

This frame of mind, the report says, leads to negligent execution of orders and disobedience of discipline. Schultz cites the case of an Alpine unit in Bavaria where soldiers attacked the duty officer with ice picks when he tried to detain one of their drunken comrades. Another unit wrecked a provincial railway station because their commanding officer failed to provide buses to take them back to their barracks after carnival celebrations.

Captain Helge Schulenburg, who last year led a junior officers' revolt for tougher discipline, complains that under the internal and external pressures to which it is subjected its course in the next few months is unpredictable.

Only a few months ago, Ceylon sponsored a resolution in the United Nations proposing that the Indian Ocean be kept free from the straits of the big powers. Now, however, soldiers complain that the army-issue hair-nets are uncomfortable and cause headaches. In some cases there have been so many complaints that medical officers authorized men to buy more elegant civilian models. With their hair-nets, German soldiers will become the laughing-stock of the world, says the battalion commander who will be responsible for transport at the Olympic Games in Munich this summer.

The traditionalists in the German army must gnash their teeth that the days of Prussian drill are over. But what is significant is that the armed forces have become the most striking illustration of the sweeping changes West Germany has experienced since World War II.

Napoles retains welter crown

CUBAN-born Jose Napoles successfully defended his world welterweight crown at the Empire Pool Wembley on Tuesday night by knocking out British challenger Ralph Charles in the seventh round.

Until the K.O. Charles had been slightly ahead on points, but he lowered his guard for a second half-way through the seventh round and it was all over.

Napoles, who learned his boxing fighting other street urchins in San Diego De Cuba and has been a pro for 14 years, has now had 72 fights with only five defeats. He has won 49 of them inside the distance.

It was Charles' third defeat in 43 fights.

View of officers

For the traditionalists in the army it was Defence Minister Helmut Schmidt's decision last year that long hair could be tolerated in the armed forces which caused discipline to become even more lax. Officers are convinced that many soldiers merely wear long hair as a protest against conscription.

Originally Schmidt ruled that hair-nets would have to be worn in situations where long hair could provoke accidents. Eight weeks later he ordered that men with long hair would have to wear hair-nets whenever on duty. Hair-nets are now part of West German army equipment.

Attacks on superiors

In his sombre 1971 balance-sheet, Schultz remarks that absence with out leave, desertion, acts of violence perpetrated against superiors and theft of army equipment increased considerably during the past year. The image of the heel-clicking and goose-stepping German soldier belongs to the past. Today, the news magazine "Der Spiegel" said recently, German citizens see drunken soldiers with shoulder-length hair, generally looking slovenly, making a nuisance of themselves in trains and at railway stations on week-ends.

When the new German army was created at Allied behest during the Cold War, the founders firmly rejected the iron discipline as it had existed since Frederick the

AHEAD THROUGH TECHNOLOGY

THE JEWS BEGIN TO RETURN TO MAJORCA

IN the late summer of 1971, a meeting was held in Palma de Majorca to announce the decision of the Spanish Government to grant permission for the establishment of an official Jewish community on the island. It was well understood that a source of pride and satisfaction this historic decision was to one who had initiated the steps which led to the chief of the three Balearic islands having its first community for 500 years.

The first officially recognized Jewish community on Spain's Balearic Islands for 500 years was organized last year. The man behind the moves, Samuel H. Bucholtz, outlines the history of Jewish settlement on the islands.

It was during an extended stay at Palma during the fall and winter of 1969-70 that I succeeded in organizing two meetings of interested Jewish residents at which it was agreed that permission should be sought from the Government on the mainland for a community to be set up. Synagogues and Jewish centres had been established in Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and other cities since 1957, but there was no centre of Jewish life on Majorca and the other two main islands of the Balearic group. We decided to use the Madrid community's constitution and bylaws as the model for Majorca, because their wording had already proved acceptable to the Spanish Government. It took just eighteen months before we were to know that it had again found favour with the Administration.

Flight from Emperors

Jews are known to have lived on Majorca since the earliest times — a 17th-century Spanish historian speaks of Jewish refugees fleeing from the wrath of the Roman Emperors Vespasian and Hadrian and landing on Majorca and the neighbouring island of Ibiza — and by the beginning of the fifth century there was a large settlement of Jews in Palma.

In the years after the invasion and conquest of Iberia by the Moors and during their rule, the Jews became so wealthy and intermingled so inextricably with the Spanish nobility, church and upper classes that a deep hatred seized the ecclesiastical authorities, who were determined to eradicate them and to confiscate their possessions.

In Majorca, however, even after the conquest of the island in the 13th century by Jaime I, called the Conqueror, and although the Jews were generally banished into ghettos, they were allowed to worship openly in synagogues and to exercise their ritual laws and ancient customs. Jews completely dominated the flourishing fields of the arts, commerce and banking. Thus Majorca, even more than the mainland, ushered in the Golden Era of Judaism, a period never equalled in a material sense before or since.

No Marranos

No Marranos have lived in Majorca since the Inquisition years. The Church accomplished a perfect job of cleansing the Balearics of Jews. Most of the Jews were murdered in the ghetto and in the courtyard of the Cathedral in Palma, where the excesses of the Inquisition surpassed in ferocity those of the mainland. Those who were not sur-dered were converted so thoroughly that they shed their original religion utterly and did not practise Judaism in secret.

They were later called Ost-otus — a derivation of Justos or Juevos, the Majorcan word for Jews — in contrast to the Marranos of the mainland, who did practise Judaism secretly. All Ost-otus have been Conversos for hundreds of years, brought up with no knowledge of Israel, Hebrew, Jewish holy day or sabbath observances.

They have been Catholics, studying the Catechism, fingering their beads, and knowing nothing and caring less about Jews and Judaism.

But even today, family names of Conversos still exist — among the leading families — Malagui, Mancina, Comparat, Benli, Magalluf, Sman, Ephraim, Besalu. No history book in the island schools mentions that those are Converso names or that Jews were a major group of the population 500 years before any other large ethnic group arrived, and 180 years after the Moors were conquered and Spaniards from the mainland arrived in large numbers. Thus, the Jews were obliterated in text and in deed.

Fiat bread

But there are still customs in Majorca which bespeak a Converso origin. Stintona sons are named after the paternal grandfather, second sons after the paternal grandmother. Animals are slaughtered by having their throats cut and by no other method. A flat type of bread is reminiscent of matza, and one of the local cakes is embossed with a symbol similar to a Magen David.

An ironic twist of history has kept the Converso strain pure, because no true Catholic family would allow a marriage with a Converso. It is almost impossible to know for certain which families are pure and which are not.

Conversos are known to have entered the priesthood and to have reached the rank of bishop and archbishop. Spanish historians are currently advancing a theory that Columbus was born on Majorca, descendant of Conversos. Majorca had great maritime importance in the 15th century; famous astronomers and cartographers lived there who were acknowledged Conversos. Columbus is said to have studied and charted his sailings with their help.

The best-known jewellers on the island, producing the famous Majorcan pearls and the exquisitely designed jewellery for which Majorca is famous, are the Miro families, Conversos all, whose talents have been transferred from one generation to another for hundreds of years, and who have monopolized the wealthy tourist trade. They are members of the Catholic Church, although called Ost-otus by the population at large, and through intermarriage are related to many wealthy island families.

Palma Cathedral boasts of its rating as the third wealthiest church in the world in terms of its collection of gold, silver, diamond, pearl and emerald objects, and religious artifacts. Its most notable feature, hanging from a 200-foot domed ceiling, is a chandelier donated by the Jewish community in the Middle Ages. It is not called to your attention and if you know about it and inquire as to its origin, the guide pretends not to have heard your question and hustles you to another part of the church.

The Jews in Majorca today (excluding Ost-otus) are few in number and practically without influence. They are mostly British, French, Belgian, Austrian, German and North Africans who have retained their original passports although they are permanent residents. A handful have lately come from the mainland and are Spanish citizens. Altogether, there may be 200 Jews living as Jews on Majorca. The island is beautiful and business opportunities good, especially in the tourist and related trades. More residents and more Spanish Jews will no doubt arrive in the future — especially with the revival after five centuries of an acknowledged Jewish community.

Rehovot firm gets rights to pattern system

Jerusalem Post Reporter REHOVOT. — World-wide distribution rights of a revolutionary system for pattern preparation for double knit fabrics have been acquired by Sci-Tex Corporation. The system cuts pattern preparation time from the six weeks it takes now to 15 minutes.

The rights were acquired from Text Industries of Greensboro, N.C., which helped in the development of the system and hold the patent for it. It uses an automated electronic knitting machine, which receives instructions from a computer, into which "knitting language" is programmed. For preparation of the pattern, and for making changes in it, all that is needed is the operation of a keyboard, similar to that of a teletype, which utilizes the computer's programme.

Sci-Tex executives estimate that during the coming year alone they will install between 20 and 25 such systems in the U.S., Western Europe and Japan.

BIOLOGICAL PEST CONTROL EXPERIMENTS AVOID POLLUTING SIDE EFFECTS OF CHEMICALS

By S. Nathan

TEL AVIV. — Searching for ways to control agricultural pests without polluting the environment, Tel Aviv University's Department of Zoology is conducting experiments in biological extermination of insects and weeds. Agricultural pests are usually exterminated by poisonous chemical sprays, which cause a considerable amount of pollution. The chemicals remain in the soil, harming useful animal life; when washed into the sea, they contaminate fish. Some of the sprays are also dangerous to humans, especially to those who handle them.

In addition, insects develop resistance to pesticides, so new formulas must be developed every few years. Marketing of the crops is also affected by poison residue that adheres to the food, and by the high cost of spraying (which increases the cost of the produce). One of the most promising alternatives to chemicals is biological extermination — which utilizes parasitic insects to devour the harmful insects. Prof. Yehoshua Kugler and Dr. Dan Gerling of the Entomological Section are now conducting exhaustive investigations into the natural enemies of agricultural pests. Biological extermination is inexpensive, since the parasite feeds on its host without any outside help. It is sufficient to simply disperse the contents of a single package over an agricultural region.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has granted IL250,000 to the Entomological Section for research into biological extermination of poisonous weeds in Israel. The work will eventually become part of a world-wide American project. (Communicated)

NEW HEBREW ULPAN OPENS IN MAY IN AMERICAN ULPAN

ISRAEL'S LARGEST LANGUAGE SCHOOL

The American Ulpán, Israel's largest language school teaching English to over 2,000 adult Israelis in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Haifa and Beersheva, is opening Hebrew Language classes for the first time this Spring.

In the following interview, Mr. Robert Goldfarb, 45, founder and director of the American Ulpán, explains why he is starting Hebrew classes at this time: "I've long regarded the Hebrew ulpán in this country as ineffective and inefficient. I've been to five ulpáns in this country seven times and failed every time. I've seen American professors of classical Hebrew fail to learn modern Hebrew."

New Material and New Teaching Method

I came to Israel in 1932 from California not knowing even the Hebrew alphabet. At the Bat Galim Ulpán in Haifa we were asked to learn the printed alphabet one day, the handwritten alphabet the next day and I was out in a week. Next came Kibbutz HaSoreva's work-study Ulpán for five months where I learned some 200 words (you need a minimum of 6000 words to be fluent in a language). I then moved to Jerusalem and attended the Municipality Ulpán, then the Hebrew University Ulpán, then Ulpán Etzion — three times! Altogether I spent 15 months in ulpán and learned about 2000 words.

We are offering a ten-month 6000-word course from ABC to fluency. The course is broken into four-months 5 mornings per week from 9:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. followed by five months of twice-weekly evening classes at all levels.

Our new course uses the same method we've been using to teach fluent English in 360 classroom hours. We're using the new books and translations prepared by David Bivin, the Director of the American Institute of Holy Land Studies Hebrew Ulpán on Mt. Zion and his all-Sabra staff. These materials have been proved in the Jerusalem school and in Beersheva where they are teaching the incoming professors of the University of the Negev. I walked into a class that had been studying for 3 months and was humiliated to discover that, without exception, every student spoke and read better than I do.

So what's new and miraculous about this method? First, beginners start with audiovisual material which teaches the sound structure of Hebrew and introduces one letter of the Hebrew alphabet at a time. Monolingual people find it almost impossible to learn by ear as multilingual people can — but they can learn with reinforcement from the printed page! Other ulpáns use what's called the "direct method," explaining each new word verbally with actions, gestures and words previously learned. But educated people require precise definitions! They can guess six or eight possible synonyms for each abstract verb or noun being introduced. Mr. Bivin provides instant translation into English, French, Spanish and Russian. There's no guesswork.

The "Encouraging" Method The "direct method" encourages the student to speak freely at the beginning and intermediate levels — so one person at a time speaks and 20 listen — mostly to poor Hebrew which must be re-learned later. In our method at the intermediate level the student memorizes a normal situational Hebrew conversation for each unit, is tested on it in both speech and writing, then spends his classroom time doing exercises and drills in speech — through controlled Hebrew. They don't "baby talk." Our students are not permitted to fall behind. They acquire 40-60 new words per unit and would be doomed to failure if not tested regularly and if 200 or 300 unknown words were allowed to accumulate. Try waking up some morning with 800 words to learn before class!

At the advanced level (2200 words) the student stops memorizing basic situational conversations and begins the first really new approach to language learning. We call it the "substantive" method. Here the student memorizes basic sentences which both introduce new sentence structures and vocabulary items and also summarizes a university-level subject on Israel. These subjects include units on Geography, Health Services, Computer Education and Political Institutions, to name a few.

Lessons to New Immigrants Our advanced level using "substantive" units instills the student up to 6000 words where he is able to understand a university lecture — and teach in Hebrew. Our tuition is higher than most government ulpáns, but far cheaper in the long run from the standpoint of time and money. We provide lots of up to two thirds the tuition cost of new immigrants in our intensive classes. Jewish Agency subsidies are also possible for certain individuals.

Registration hours are from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. every day (except in Beersheva where we receive on Thursdays only). In Jerusalem we are at 1 Rehov Etzion on Zloty Square (over Stelmatsky's book store); in Tel Aviv at 13 Rehov Dabizoff; in Haifa at 13 Rehov Bialik and in Beersheva in the Shavit Theatre building in the centre of town. Advt.

HOW TO BUILD HOMES QUICKER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: I am an American civil engineer licensed in the State of New York for over 25 years. I am also a contractor and builder of apartment houses in and around New York City. I have been in Israel as a tourist for the past five months and will be remaining a few months longer.

During two previous visits to Israel, I observed the slow rate (by New York standards) of apartment building construction here. I made up my mind that, during my lengthy stay in Israel this time, I would try to reach someone in the Israeli housing construction industry and point out to them certain facts, namely that in New York, the same type of buildings are built of the same materials and with the use of similar methods and with the use of the same (and not necessarily superior) equipment, and that construction time is approximately one-third of the time it takes to build here. I was hopeful that I could interest construction people to look into the New York methods and apply them here.

I have met with many important engineers and construction people here and so far the results have been nil. With the exception of one engineer, everyone in the construction industry to whom I have spoken is looking for some sort of miracle to occur which will, in one fell swoop, solve the problem and speed up the rate of Israeli construction. They have given me certain names. It is called "pre-fabrication," or sometimes "modular" or "system" construction. It is constantly spoken about as if it were some sort of magic formula which will cut down both building time and costs.

Without a doubt, pre-fabrication and other modern methods may eventually have some effect on construction time and costs. It must be kept in mind, however, that nowhere in the world have pre-fabrication methods or "systems" construction proven themselves to be so successful in apartment building construction that they have been accepted by a significant part of the construction industry. Even in the most developed countries these methods are still to be considered as experimental and by no means of proven worth.

Organizational techniques
When Housing Minister Sharaf therefore indicates, as he does in a speech quoted in your issue of March 12, that the solution of Israel's construction problems will come when kitchen walls (or other similar items) are factory made and installed as "built-in" units, I must respectfully say that this solution is that of a cabinet minister and not of a construction man. The root of the problem lies not in the lack of pre-fabrication but in the failure of the Israeli construction industry to use to their fullest advantage the admittedly old-fashioned but nevertheless tried and true methods still in use in the United States. These conservative methods result in 20-storey reinforced concrete apartment buildings being built in 15 months from start to occupancy by tenants. These buildings are incidentally being built by a highly unionized work force, working five days a week, with a constant shortage of labour and with no pre-fabrication.

Under these conditions, reinforced concrete apartment buildings can be built in New York City in from 12 to 15 months (depending on their height), they can also be built here in Israel. I believe that only when Israel has reached the speed and efficiency of New York in the use of conventional construction procedures, should she then allow herself the luxury of further trying to cut down construction time through the use of new and experimental techniques and systems. It should, in my opinion, be the first function of the Israeli construction industry to try to learn, for example, why the skeleton of a reinforced concrete building can be built at the rate of one storey every four to five working days in New York, while it proceeds at the rate of one storey per month, or longer, in Israel.

It is the unusual 20-storey apartment building that takes more than 15 months to build, from start to occupancy by tenants, in New York. Israel can do the same, or even better. There are no magic secrets or formulas involved, only the use of the proper construction procedures and organizational techniques.

THE DANGERS OF TAMPERING WITH THE WEATHER

By DANIEL BEHRMAN

HUMAN tinkering with the climate, whether voluntary or accidental, might well wipe sea ice from the Arctic Ocean and lead to irreversible effects that no one can yet foresee.

A group of 30 scientists from 14 countries has called for an international agreement to prevent experiments on a large scale — that is experiments which may have a long-term effect on the climate over an area of more than 1,000,000 sq. km. until the scientific community is agreed on what that effect may imply.

The group met in the Study of Man's Impact on Climate (SMIC), sponsored by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and held at the Wijk conference centre near Stockholm. The report of the study has just been published by the MIT Press.

The report singles out Arctic sea ice as the feature of the earth's surface which is most sensitive to man-made changes. Once melting started in the Arctic, a "positive feedback" process would set in and it is highly unlikely that the melting would stop.

The explanation lies in the change of the so-called albedo, or degree of light given off by the ocean. A sea covered with ice reflects radiation from the sun; if the ice were to melt, the sea would absorb more radiation. The more the ice melted, the more the sea would absorb heat, thereby speeding the melting process. An ice-free Arctic would be the result.

Bering Straits

Proposals have already been made to eliminate the ice. The SMIC report states: "Probably the most ambitious of these suggestions is the concept of damming the Bering Strait and pumping water from the Arctic Ocean into the Pacific. This would induce an increased flow of warm Atlantic water into the Arctic Ocean, substantially modify the heat budget of this ocean and significantly modify, or even eliminate, the area covered by sea ice."

"Another suggestion has been that of spreading many tons of soot or black dust on the ice by cargo aircraft, thereby increasing the rate of melting during the spring and summer."

"While these are merely suggestions now, they point to the very real possibility that man could, if he chose to, modify the global climate deliberately in a very substantial way. We hope that he will make every effort to understand the full implications of his actions before he tries."

Even without such experiments, we might still melt the sea ice. According to the scientists, within the next century, there is a "real possibility that a global temperature increase produced by man's injection of heat and carbon dioxide into his environment may lead to a dramatic reduction or even elimination of Arctic sea ice."

While the melting of sea ice could lead to large-scale modification of climate, particularly in the Northern Hemisphere, it would not affect the level of the ocean. But if the Greenland ice cap melted, the sea level would rise seven metres... and a number of coastal cities would find themselves under water.

SMIC indicates that the rise in sea level recently recorded may have another human cause: the "mixing" of what is known as fossil ground-water. This water percolated underground in the past, perhaps thousands of years ago. Today, we tap it, incidentally using a non-renewable resource when we do. But the water is no longer locked away under the earth. It evaporates from the fields that it irrigates, it runs off into rivers and streams. Then it reaches the sea, either through the rivers or as rainfall. Water that was once underground, therefore, is now being added to the ocean.

Growth-rate changes

The increased concentration of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere produced by the burning of coal and petroleum products can increase the amount of radiation reaching the earth and decrease the amount escaping into space, the often-discussed "greenhouse effect." Some of this excess carbon dioxide is taken up by plants and forests, some of it by the ocean. What is worrying, though, is the inability of science to explain year-to-year changes in the annual growth rate of atmospheric carbon dioxide beyond that expected from changes in fossil fuel production.

The SMIC report states: "If the atmosphere or oceans are significantly altering their capacity to take up atmospheric carbon dioxide, then it is necessary to understand and predict these characteristics as well as their average behaviour over the past 10 years."

MAKING BUS TRAVEL EASIER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir — Bus-riding is enjoyed — or otherwise — by the great majority of the local population, and travelling by bus will, I am sure, improve with time.

However, I should like to appeal to bus travellers to prepare the correct fare before entering a bus, or better still, to buy tickets beforehand. It would be of interest to know how much valuable time is wasted unnecessarily because of this lack of foresight on the part of the public. Often a queue of people have to stand in the pouring rain, with umbrellas already folded, while passengers ahead offer IL5, IL10, IL50 and even IL100 notes.

Usually the bus drivers are very patient on this score, but this morning as I was standing waiting to board a bus in the pouring rain, I heard the driver rebuke a passenger for offering a IL5 note. This rebuke I found praiseworthy, but the justified impatience of an occasional driver, is, in my mind, not sufficient.

DANGEROUS DRUGS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir — The recent reports of the teratogenic effects (fetal abnormalities) of Imipramine or tetrinal strongly indicate that more stringent tests are necessary for every new marketable synthetic drug. Such drugs may have excellent pharmaceutical properties and may even be genuine but the fact remains that every drug has side effects which may be extremely dangerous. The thalidomide syndrome is such an example.

Imipramine has been known for over 20 years and its teratogenic effects in animals such as rabbits and rats were observed about nine years ago. It has not yet been proved whether Imipramine is teratogenic in women. In fact it may be devoid of this dangerous side effect. But — is the risk worth the anguish that every woman had after having taken thalidomide?

I would strongly suggest that the Ministry of Health should be much stricter in allowing the ever increasing new synthetic drugs to be marketed.

GUARDIANS OF BUSINESS ETHICS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir — I learned through your columns of the existence of the Bering Business Bureau in Tel Aviv. As I was having difficulties in my dealings with a firm in Jerusalem and my repeated letters and personal calls evoked no reply whatsoever, I forwarded the details to the B.B.B. Within a very short time they followed the matter through to a most successful conclusion and even obtained for me the return of my money, which was more than I had anticipated.

It is indeed fortunate that there exists such a guardian of business ethics in Israel.

LEGAL EDUCATION

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir — You performed a valuable public service by publishing Leonard Schroeter's article on legal education in Israel (March 17). Unfortunately, his article understated the sorry system of educating advocates in Israel — an antiquated system, intellectually dull, detached from the nation's courts and law practice and failing to teach "advocacy."

I hope Schroeter's article will encourage change, as well as informing the public.

Five mayors win—five lose— in Judea/Samaria elections

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter... New mayors are elected in five of the 10 towns in Judea and Samaria...

Incumbent mayors were outvoted in Toubas, Jericho, Jenin, Toubas and Ya'bad. In the first four towns, but not in Ya'bad, the defeated mayors were nevertheless voted to the councils as minority members.

In Toubas, where 96 per cent of the town's 823 voters cast their ballots for the young lawyer Hashem Saleh...

In Ya'bad, 97 per cent of the village's 687 municipal voters participated in the elections to bring in Mr. Raweh Anis el-Kassem...

In the other five West Bank towns, the status quo was more or less maintained with minor upsets here and there.

Elazar: Moscow summit could effect M.E. war

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent... The chief of staff, Rav-Aluf David Elazar, sees the danger of a new Middle East flashpoint building up...

Egyptian army would under no circumstances be capable of rolling the Israel Defence Forces back from the Canal banks. The Israel army was, in turn, not interested in crossing the waterway...

Answering a series of questions put to him by Raphael Bashan of "Yediot Ahranot," the Chief of Staff said that he attached the greatest importance to the meeting of President Nixon with Soviet leaders in Moscow this May...

Commenting on the ousting of IDF instructors from Uganda, the Chief of Staff said he knew that the men had done a good job, adding, with a smile, that he had only recently heard praise lavished upon them by none other than President Amin himself.

The Chief of Staff: "Had we given the Arab armies time to organize themselves and launch their operations against us first, we would have exposed Israel to most serious dangers. This was the concerted opinion of all staff members of the GHQ at the time, including the two brigadiers you mentioned."

On the Mig 23: "Rav-Aluf Elazar noted bluntly that Israel had no plan to match its altitude or speed. 'However, I want to put matters in their proper context, without disclosing any details as to how and what and when we intend to do something about it.'"

On the possibility of the Omariya school inside St. Stephen's Gate, it will conclude at the 14th Station of burial, inside the Holy Sepulchre.

Everyone in the National Religious Party believed that Ezer Weizman's change of attitude by the Uganda President towards Israel: "I think that is a form of payment by Amin to Libya and Egypt in order to achieve closer ties with these countries."

On the Mig 23: "Rav-Aluf Elazar noted bluntly that Israel had no plan to match its altitude or speed. 'However, I want to put matters in their proper context, without disclosing any details as to how and what and when we intend to do something about it.'"

Ben-Aharon: social gap has widened since '67

Jerusalem Post Reporter... The social gap in this country has widened considerably since the Six Day War, Mr. Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, Secretary-General of the Histadrut, said here Wednesday morning.

He was addressing the first world conference of Jewish emigrants from Morocco at the Meliuh Hotel. The most obvious symptom of this gap, he said, was an unjust distribution of the national income.

DAYAN: SMALL FORCE MUST PROTECT US

Jerusalem Post Reporter... A SHDOD. — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, addressing a luncheon of the Moroccan Jewish conference here on Wednesday, said that the main security problem facing Israel today was to guard the present frontiers.

Mr. Ben-Aharon said that the lowest 10 per cent of the population, in terms of income, get only 1.5 per cent of the national income. The middle segment of the population gets 9.2 per cent, while the top 10 per cent segment enjoys 20.8 per cent.

Commenting on the ousting of IDF instructors from Uganda, the Chief of Staff said he knew that the men had done a good job, adding, with a smile, that he had only recently heard praise lavished upon them by none other than President Amin himself.

Mr. Ben-Aharon proposed a 10-year plan in which each year the living standards of several thousand low-income citizens would be systematically raised.

Israel on trek for Pessah

Jerusalem Post Staff

Israel yesterday celebrated the first day of the seven-day festival of Pessah, commemorating its liberation from Egyptian bondage over 30 centuries ago and marking the advent of spring.

The story of Israel's sojourn in Egypt and the Exodus was related at sederim held on Wednesday night in homes, army camps, kibbutzim, hotels and hospitals from the slopes of Mount Hermon in the north to the shores of Sharm e-Sheikh on the Red Sea.

Despite an inauspicious beginning on Wednesday, the eve of Passover — which was generally hazy and damp — spring was very much in evidence yesterday as thousands of citizens took to the roads to spend the holiday sight-seeing, camping and visiting relatives. Many people are taking an extra day off from work today, to "bridge" the long week-end.

The next few days are expected to be mild and sunny, and the weatherman said last night.

Jerusalem was quiet yesterday morning, with most of its residents resting after the seder feast. Few persons prayed at the Western Wall in the morning, but the square gradually filled up with visitors and worshippers towards the afternoon service (mincha).

Synagogue services throughout the country were crowded, with recent immigrants being honoured in many synagogues with a special reading of the Torah.

The I.D.F.'s main seder was held this year at a Central Command base. It was conducted by the Chief Chaplain to the Forces, Tat-Aluf Mordechai Piron. Present at the seder were Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, the Chief of Staff, Rav-Aluf David Elazar, and the O/C Central Command, Aluf Behavim Ze'evi. Sections of the Haggada were read by army commanders, with Rabbi Piron providing a commentary.

The afikomen (the hidden matza), part of which had been concealed by a girl soldier and part by a paratrooper, has returned to the Chief Chaplain in exchange for a promise by the Chief of Staff to allocate IL100,000 for the construction of a meeting hall at the base and for authorization of a trip and holiday for the paratroop unit.

now open — is operating a roving emergency patrol. Every car entering the town is presented by a high school pupil with a letter of welcome, a list of camping and first aid sites, a map of Eilat — and a large nylon trash bag.

The civil administration at Sharm e-Sheikh reported a quiet day, but is expecting the first wave of visitors today.

Elsewhere in the south, over 5,000 vehicles were reported in the Dead Sea, with hotels filled to capacity. No major accidents were reported anywhere in the Negev or Arava.

LESS TRAFFIC IN NORTH

In the north, tens of thousands spent the seder night away from home, mainly with relatives, in hotels and kibbutz guest houses. Traffic yesterday was thinner than usual at this time of year.

Hotel owners in Safad reported a good rate of occupancy, two-thirds by tourists from overseas. "But we still have some space left," one hotel owner told The Jerusalem Post.

A group of newcomers from the Soviet Union celebrated their first seder in Israel at the Beit Bussel immigrant hostel in Safad. They were obviously moved when the Chief Rabbi of Safad, Rabbi Simcha Hachon Kaplan, came to join them.

On Mount Hermon in the Golan Heights, a new ski slope was opened on the eastern slope, some 300 metres above the existing one, where the snow is now three metres deep. The Mount Hermon authorities have set up another, smaller ski lift there.

In Haifa, Israel ships in the port held sederim for their crews, with Christian seamen joining their Israeli shipmates for the celebration. Participants were not restricted to the traditional four glasses of wine, our Haifa reporter reports.

Yesterday evening, the second seder night in the Diaspora, many hotels held a second seder for their tourist guests. The main seder in Jerusalem was held at the Kings Hotel.

In Tel Aviv, the thousands of tourists who have filled the hotels enjoyed yesterday's sunny spring weather at sidewalk cafes and on the beaches. But the fact that many restaurants have closed down for the week of Passover has created problems for visitors encountering a Paris-in-August phenomenon. Many restaurants prefer to give their employees their annual week's holiday during Passover and shut down altogether, rather than go to the expense and trouble of meeting the rigid kosher requirements.

Burglars rob old woman of IL5,000

Jerusalem Police have arrested a suspect in connection with the theft of IL5,000 from a 76-year-old woman who lives alone in Rehov Zichron Tuva, near Mahane Yehuda, at three o'clock yesterday morning after the seder.

When the victim, Mrs. Hatoun Akh, heard a knock on the door, she opened it and two men rushed in. They seized her and warned her not to summon help. Then they searched the house, found the cash, and fled.

Police expect to make another arrest shortly. (Hem)

Soldiers accused in death by stray bullet

TEL AVIV. — Two soldiers, residents of Be'er Brak, were released on IL1,000 bail each on Wednesday on suspicion of causing the death of a building contractor who was killed by a stray bullet two weeks ago.

The victim, Gedalya Tshatzki, 57, was supervising work at a building site in Rehov Asfkenazi in Ramat Gan when he was felled by a bullet which lodged in his chest. A post-mortem revealed that the bullet, fired from a Kalashnikov rifle, had come from a distance of over one kilometre.

A police and army investigation team learned that two soldiers had been practising with a Kalashnikov at the time, not far from the firing ranges near the Ramat Gan Stadium. The suspects, Zvi Brenner and Mordechai Hasout, both 20, were arrested this week. Police told the Magistrate that the young men had been firing the weapon illegally — without permission and under no supervision. (Hem)

Jerusalem O.C. hurt in crash 7 KILLED ON ROADS

Seven persons were killed, three of them children, and nine were injured in five separate road accidents since Tuesday night.

One child, two-year-old Nahel Hajjal, was killed on Wednesday afternoon in Old Acre, when she was struck by a horse and cart as she crossed the street. Another child, 15-month-old Hassan Najfo Hussein, was killed at the same time near his home in Nahel village in Galilee, by a pickup van driven by a relative. The third child, Hassan Khalil Sabeh, seven, from Acre, was killed yesterday crossing the Acre-Nahariya highway, when he was struck by a van driven by an Acre man, Moshe Derl.

In another collision, Wednesday, near Kfar Tabor, 3 persons were killed and two injured.

The victims included Binjamin Ghad-Pomanski, 57, a member of Kibbutz Beit Eshelitz, and two residents of Kfar Kama, Assad Ishak and Ahmad Ahmad.

Earlier, before midnight on Tuesday, a 64-year-old taxi driver, Michael Amiel, of Petah Tikva, died after a collision with a car. The accident took place at an intersection in Petah Tikva. Six of his passengers were seriously hurt, while a seventh received minor injuries.

The car occupants were apparently not hurt. (Hem)

HUSSEIN

Jordanian-Israeli side, so to speak — difficulties of the human element, the human suffering, the tragedy of the lost land the people who have suffered so much... I believe that the Syrian one or the Egyptian one is considerably easier.

In Jerusalem, officials refused to comment on King Hussein's interview without having seen the full text. Little importance is usually attached to interviews by Arab leaders, especially Hussein, in the Western press, where they tend to present their policies as more moderate than they are in fact.

In the "New York Times" interview Hussein said that Israel's recognition of the principle of Arab sovereignty over East Jerusalem would suffice as a point of departure for creating an entirely new situation. The "Times" said his earlier statement on Jerusalem had been interpreted as a demand for a return to the former division. But Hussein rejected that in the interview. "We do not envisage a return to a divided city. Jerusalem's position is unique."

"Some say Jerusalem should belong to the people of the Jewish faith, just as Rome belongs to the Christians and Mecca to the Moslems. But nowhere in the world have the great religions met except in Jerusalem and therefore it must belong to all." Asked if he would favour an internationalization of the city, Hussein said: "No, the Arabs and the Israelis should do it themselves."

In other points made during the two interviews Hussein said:

- The "overwhelming majority of the people of Palestine" supported his plan for a united federal kingdom after Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank.
- Although he had not met personally with Israel's leaders he had taken "soundings" through intermediaries, including Ambassador Gunnar Jarving. He distanced his tested Israeli reaction to his latest proposal on Jerusalem and found it "violently negative." But he declined to say when or how the testing had been done.
- Relations between Egypt and Jordan were strained. But he hoped this was a passing phase. At the same time he was "disappointed and shocked" at the conduct of the Egyptian legal proceedings against those arrested for the murder of Jordanian Prime Minister Bishr e-Tel in Cairo last November.
- The local elections held in the Israel administered West Bank were "illegal" and carried out against the will of the Palestinian people. But he added: "I understand the problem they (the Palestinians) live with: they are all patriots to me."

US Posts destroy matza which Soviets rejected

WASHINGTON (AP). — The U.S. Postal Service has destroyed 8,000 pounds of matza originally mailed to the Soviet Embassy for distribution to Jews in the Soviet Union, Senator Harrison Williams said on Tuesday.

The matza, most of it coming from Jewish families and organizations in the New York metropolitan area, arrived at the Washington Post Office during the past month.

When the Embassy refused to accept delivery, and it began to pile up, postal officials destroyed it, according to Mr. Williams.

The New Jersey Democrat has asked the postal service to explain why the matza was destroyed.

A spokesman told him: "Some of the matza had been in post offices for a while," and it might have attracted rodents and bugs within a short time.

"We also had a great fear that some person connected with the organizations involved could have poisoned some of it," he said. "It's the same with Halloween: we can't keep the innards tringes out of it. We could not take the chance."

New effort to keep Haifa's beauty

HAIFA. — The Haifa Public Council for Environmental Quality has reconstituted itself as a branch of Makras, the Public Council for the Prevention of Noise and Air Pollution. The aim is to attract more volunteers to work for cleaner air and beaches, less noise, and preservation of the city's natural beauty which is being despoiled by clumsy planning and ugly architecture.

"From now on we'll accept complaints from private persons on matters related to environment," the Council's chairman, Mr. Azobelo Peranilo, said. For this purpose the Makras branch will employ a part-time secretary.

The Haifa environmentalists have visited the Nasher cement plant and were told that the first filter which has been installed in one of the kilns efficiently prevents the release of dust into the air. A second filter will be in operation by the end of the year, and a third will be installed before 1975. The company is also spending IL250,000 to cover up the scars caused by its quarry on the slope of Mt. Carmel.

Police disperse Jews from Moscow synagogue

MOSCOW. — Uniformed police and plainclothes auxiliaries dispersed a crowd of some 2,000 Jews from in front of Moscow's main synagogue on Wednesday night after the Passover seder service.

The police, out in unusual force, pushed up to the synagogue steps and began wedging the crowd in two, sending part of it up the street, and part down. Plainclothes auxiliaries had been placed at either end of the street to prevent newcomers from joining the crowd.

An officer repeated into a bullhorn, "Move on, go on, move on." Police were gentle but firm, urging some with a hand on the elbow. Some sources said the police went into action when a number of Jews started singing and dancing.

There were no incidents and the squadron of police buses parked on nearby streets to handle any arrests were not needed. There was an unconfirmed report that three young men had been picked up by police. Two of them were later released.

As the solid line of policemen and Drushnikim — the police auxiliaries — moved the crowd away from the synagogue, one young man in a skull cap turned to a foreigner and remarked, "charming isn't it?"

Last night's action seemed to take the Jewish community by surprise. Near the end of the service on the first evening of Passover, a man rushed into the packed synagogue and whispered urgently to whomever would listen, "there's trouble outside."

The police dispersal of the crowd seemed to mark a change in policy. In the past, Jews were permitted to gather in large numbers outside the synagogue on holidays.

The Chief Rabbi of Rome, Dr. Ello Toaff, yesterday accused the Soviet authorities of arresting or harassing Soviet Jews who tried to visit their synagogues. He urged the Soviet Government to permit Jews to carry out their traditional worship during the Passover.

Five 'Hebrews' find bondsman

BEERSHEBA. — The five BH Hebrews standing trial for the slaughter in the death of a Tel Black Hebrew in Dimona last July were finally able to make home for Pessah.

On Tuesday, the District Court agreed to release them on bail. The five men could not find necessary guarantors. They spent additional night in jail, but Wednesday morning a guarantor came their aid, and they were released. The guarantor's name was available.

The trial is scheduled to resume on April 12.

No one at airport to greet immigrants

LOD AIRPORT. — A family of immigrants from an Asian country arriving last night at Lod Airport found no one there to take care of them — the Absorption Ministry officials having all gone home for the holiday.

After some time an airport official phoned the home of Mr. Uri Narkis, head of the Jewish Agency's Immigration Department, and things began to move. Within 40 minutes a Jewish Agency worker arrived and processed the family, comprising a couple, their six-month-old twin girls and a grandmother.

Officials here said they had not received prior notice of the family's arrival. But they could not explain why the Ministry official had not been posted on emergency duty over the Passover. Normally, the Ministry maintains a 24-hour service. (Hem)

Cut-price air fares expected

GENEVA (Reuter). — Air fares on routes between Europe, the Middle East and Africa, and between Asia and the southwest Pacific, will fall open to price-slashing competition from tomorrow, a spokesman for the International Air Transport Association (IATA) said here yesterday.

The situation arises because governments of countries on these routes have failed to hand in agreement to IATA headquarters here, on new packages agreed last December, the spokesman added. It was highly unlikely that the government and airlines of all the countries would agree among themselves before the April 1 deadline, he said.

On December 21 the airlines running these routes agreed, after a three-week conference here, to cut individual excursion fares by as much as 50 per cent. Normal first and economy class fares were set to go up by an average of four per cent. This was part of a worldwide bid by regular airlines to woo back passengers from charter companies, and take a bigger share of the rapidly-expanding international leisure travel market.

Music fete in Ein Gev

By YOHANAN ROEMER
Jerusalem Post Music Critic

EIN GEV. — The Israel Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mendel Rodan, opened this year's Pessah Festival at the Esco Music Centre here last night.

Many tourists were among the large audience, which heard the world premiere of Israeli composer Ben-Zion Orgad's latest work, "Tale of a Flute" for voices and 19 instruments. Eva Bernathova, a Czechoslovakian now residing in London, played the solo part in Beethoven's Second Piano Concerto. The Sixth Symphony by Tchaikowsky crowned the evening.

Tourism Minister Moshe Kol greeted the audience on behalf of the Government.

Tonight the Festival will continue with a programme dedicated to the kibbutz movement's artistic talents, "Songs and Dance in the Kibbutz." Tomorrow night, Odette, the famous negro folk singer, will be the star of the evening.

Sophisticated dance, by the Bat-sheva Dance Company, will be Sunday's theme and on Monday, the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Sergiu Comissiona, will perform works by Roman, Brahms, and the Violin Concerto by Mendelssohn, with charming Japanese violinist Teiko Maehashi as soloist.

Pop music will dominate on Tuesday night, with "Exspection," the Dutch Pop Ensemble, giving their versions of classical music. The traditional "Army Parade" — entertainment groups and army orchestras — will close the Festival at Ein Gev on Wednesday.

Another Beduin watchman the Police said the victim — a name could not be learnt last — was an Aftouwa tribesman. kerosene stove on which the tin cooked his meals was thought to have been the cause of the blaze.

"To your health!"

"People ask us how we stay so young. I tell them it's because every year we spend at least two or three weeks at a health resort, either in Austria, Luxembourg, Belgium, or Czechoslovakia. It makes for a perfect vacation. You enjoy all the good things of life in a beautiful, relaxed setting."

"And what's more our holiday spirits rise as soon as we board the Sabena jet. Perhaps it's because the Belgians put so much importance on the "Good things in life." They carry them onto their airline!"

That's why Mr. and Mrs. Dagan fly Sabena Belgian World Airlines to the health resorts
